

LEADERSHIP

In the training industry, the resources for leadership training are vast and diverse. The most critical step in leadership training is a rigorous assessment of the learning need and/or the organizational intent. A sound needs assessment will ensure that you choose the best learning tool to meet your training goals.

Leadership resources cover a wide range of content: One on one coaching, communicating with authority, influencing followers, motivating and inspiring, are all examples of leadership course content.

- Does your leadership team have several learning objectives? RightHands Resources will work with you to assess the needs of your leadership team and prioritize your learning objectives.
- Would you like an objective analysis of the leadership resources that are currently available? RightHands Resources will research the industry and deliver a report on the best industry resources for your specific requirements.
- Have you already determined the training you want? RightHands Resources will locate the resource, negotiate the best terms for your team, and arrange the training event.
- Do you already have leadership training in place? RightHands Resources can align training metrics and develop sustainability tools.
